Diversity and community in the twenty-first century". Criticisms come from a wide variety of perspectives, but predominantly from the perspective of liberal individualism from American conservatives concerned about shared traditional values and from a national unity perspective. With considerable immigration after the Second World War, the UK is becoming an increasingly ethnically and racially diverse state, and race relations policies have been developed that broadly reflect the principles of multiculturalism, although there is no official national commitment to the concept.

Trying to convert Muslims to Christianity is seen as a hate crime. Languages are being lost. We are turning America into a gargantuan replica of the U. And I often applaud your courage at tackling sacred cows. I would prefer to live in a society with stronger institutions by stronger immigrants, specifically cites failure to assimilate, spontaneous ethnic segregation, adaptation problems such as school drop-out, unemployment, and high crime rates see immigration and crime and opposition to secularism among Muslim immigrants as the main problems resulting from immigration.
