This story is told from the perspective of Annie Biddle - a something year old woman succumbing to Dementia. Very much enjoyed this read about Ann, a grandmother who is linked to the past through her 8 year old granddaughter Ellie.

I've visited hundreds and hundreds of book clubs via Google Hangouts so in person. What I really loved about this book was how the author really described, in a believable way, what it's like to be in the early stages of dementia and how they feel when a family member "checks up" on. Are the conclusions we reached as young people entirely accurate? But I found this one annoying and without purpose -- could not wait for it to end.

Even Kirkus likes me! While on Twitter, I was involved in a conversation with other 'Twits' I don't think we're actually called that - but, it's funny, so - I use it about books we'd recently read and enjoyed.
