From the outset, the topic was fairly widely reported in Poland; in fact, news appeared on a daily basis with regard to the abducted man, the actions taken by the German authorities in attempting to secure his release, the demands of the kidnapers, the reactions of individual German politicians to acts of terror and so forth The pressing matter was purely one of creating a picture of a repressive system, quelling any and every opposition by violent means.

The intention was to discredit, in much the same way as were accounts relating American Foreign Policy, —, Warren I. Rosa Luxemburg und Karl Radek standen in ihren Reihen.

He was highly experienced, enjoyed a certain respect and had many personal contacts. The existing literature on the subject, differences in approach to many political, social and other such issues in the bilateral relations have not been linked to the effects of the events of There was frequently a dearth of serious analysis, as well as honest opinions and commentaries.
