Smith takes us on the Speaking with the Angel of this wonderful old woman as she contemplates preparing those last meals and puts everything she has into making it a meal that counts for. Walking into the Wind - John O'Farrell - very very dry piece about 3 friends, one of whom becomes a mime, the other 2 go into insurance, and how their roles reverse over time until one of them has completely lost the plot. But overall I was entertained!

ColinFirth'sstorywasmyleastfavorite:Viewall3comments. PMQ - Robert Harris - Hornby's brother-in-law, this is actually one of the funnier ones, about the British PM getting into a big misunderstanding with a reporter, a 15yr old girl, and reads like a Monty Python skit. Hornby dedicated this book to his son Danny who is an autistic child, he then went on to describe very eloquently the plight Speaking with the Angel autistic children and what his experience as a father to one is like. But to me this really captures the heat of clumsy eager Teenage sex in away that most works dealing with the subject don't. WanttoReadsaving...Overall, Speaking With the Angel is a good collection of modern British writing. Short stories are also a good way to discover writers, taste them and try them on for size.
