That is what Mr. A Sentimental Journey is a novel without a plot, a journey with

I had just finished my supper when La Fleur came in to give me an account of his adventure: A shoe coming loose from the fore foot of the thill-horse, at the beginning of the ascent of mount Taurira, the postilion dismounted, twisted the shoe off, and put it in his pocket; as the ascent was of five or six miles, and that horse our main dependence, I made A Sentimental Journey point of having the shoe fastened on again, as well as we could; but the postilion had thrown away the nails, and the hammer in the chaise A Sentimental Journey being of no great use without them, I submitted to go on. A master of ambiguity and double entendre Sterne is nevertheless as concerned as his peers with exploring the nature of virtue; unlike other writers of sentimental fiction Sterne insists on the inseparability of desire and feeling.

Not sure what the author was going for. As a result, I have difficulty giving a coherent account of the entire book, but recall that parts of it were very amusing. You may find it helpful to search within the site to see how similar or related subjects are covered.
