Of Calvin and his instruction, Knox stated that this was "the most perfect school of Christ that ever was since the days of the Apostles. According to his own account, he burst into tears and fled to his room. Knox arrived at the castle on 10 April

It was at the urging of friends who pointed out that he could serve a useful purpose. He assisted in formulating some of their creeds, but his influence goes further than that. But, after all, what matters all of that when a man steadfastly maintains the truth? Knox therefore agreed on a temporary order of service based on a compromise between the two.
